Dear [REDACTED]

I get in touch with you again because it came to my attention that [REDACTED] published several errata concerning [REDACTED] work. I ask you kindly to answer the following questions:

- It took a lot of time to resolve this issue. Why?

- [REDACTED]

- The publication of the errata shows that several references were missing. Several international scientists speak of plagiarism. Do these missing references, according to your guidelines, qualify as plagiarism?

I thank you for a reply until Friday. Feel free to contact me anytime if you have any questions. Kindest Regards,

Elia Blülle
